Although probably more the fault of the course than the teacher, there was too much material for him to cover in such a brief period. The book is exceptionally poor and useless. If you miss even a single day, we move so quickly that it is extremely difficult to recover. WE sometimes have to learn new material the day of the test, after homework is due or the same day that homework is due! The course alone is not enough to learn the material unless you already know much of it. The only way I was able to score highly and comprehend was through extensive study and practice with the NetTutor and at Milledge Hall - these were huge assets. Other than that, a decent professor.

always very enthusiastic, good grading on quizzes and gave partial credit, always available to go over a test and give credit where it was due. worksheets were very beneficial with many examples

Bergonio did a good job on letting us know what material was going to be on the test. There was never material on test that we had not covered in class.

He always made time before and after class to meet with students that had questions or that wanted to go over their previous tests.

He made a lot of silly errors, but overall he was great. I didn't have a clue about all this going in but he helped me prepare for the tests. Thanks for the help Phil.

He was very enthusiastic and easy to listening to. Sometimes he lost me because he lost himself when he would write the wrong thing. He helped students out in any way possible though. I would definitely take him again.

I feel like the whole point of the class was the test, we were taught for the test and not just for the reason for learning. I think that tests should be the second most important thing, instead of the first

I hate math and have never, EVER been good at it. It is usually excruciatingly painful for me. Phil Bergonio's class was probably about as enjoyable as a math class could get for me. It's great the way he takes time out to help and assist EVERYBODY, He had review sessions outside of class. That's a pretty good instructor. Since I've been here, only Dr. deHaseth went that far to help students. Phil's incredible.

I liked the way he taught. He used a lot of examples of different problems that we might see. It really helped me get ready for the test. I feel like I actually knew the material. He was nice too!

Makes lots of little mistakes, great guy though. Is phair, phun, and phreestylin! Phil for president!

My instructor was very fair. He realized that J-Exam can be difficult to get used to and so he was willing to sit down with us during his office hours and give partial credit on tests based on our scratch work.

Phil is a great instructor! He gets a lot of material done during class and is ALWAYS available for extra help if you just ask. I would recommend him to anyone!

Phil is the man. Although he jinxed me thus ending my three test 100% streak, he was still a really good instructor. His worksheet method made referencing how to complete homework problems a breeze. I never had to get a test grade changed, but my friends told me he was very fair. Also, he not only taught us how to do the problem, but also how to do the problem in the method least likely to cause a careless error in Jexam. Definitely the best instructor i've had so far at UGA sometimes makes simple errors in mathematics that throw the wholes problem. Example- he will have 5 minus 2 and then write 4.

The source had too much material for a semester. The tests take place too quickly and frequently.

The teaching in this class was fine, but there is no way that he can effectively move through the amount of curriculum necessary before a test. The class was stressful because it seemed like we never had enough time to get through the material before the next test without flying through it. The professor definitely worked hard.
